

Project Report: Professional Communication & Email Etiquette

As a Digital Ambassador, it is important to communicate professionally online and guide others to do the same. In this project, I learned how to write formal emails and follow proper digital communication practices.

Firstly, I created a professional email to a professor requesting an extension for an assignment. The email included a clear subject line, polite greeting, and a well-structured body explaining the reason for the request. I ensured the tone was respectful and ended the email with a proper sign-off. Secondly, I wrote an email to an internship coordinator expressing my interest in a summer internship. This email highlighted my academic background, skills, and willingness to learn while maintaining a professional tone throughout.

In addition to email writing, I also created a checklist for responsible social media use. It includes important practices such as thinking before posting, using respectful language, protecting personal information, and verifying content before sharing. It also highlights what to avoid, such as spreading fake news, sharing sensitive data, or engaging in negative behavior online.

Overall, this project helped me understand the importance of clear, respectful, and responsible communication in both academic and social platforms, which is essential for building a positive digital presence.

Reflection

One situation where poor digital communication caused a serious problem is when a student sent an email to a professor without a proper subject line or respectful tone. The unclear and informal message created confusion and gave a negative impression, which delayed the response and caused the student to miss an important deadline.

This issue could have been avoided by following proper email etiquette, such as using a clear subject line, polite language, and a structured format. Professional communication helps in conveying messages effectively and builds a good impression.

From this project, I learned that even small mistakes in communication can lead to big problems. I will make sure to always write clear, respectful, and well-structured emails and maintain a responsible attitude while communicating online.
